An alarm of fire last night would have called our citizens to duty. Twenty negroes from Covington stampeded and left our enterprising citizen, Williamson, in the Jurch.

In yesterday's issue we mentioned the fact that a Mrs. Wilson, an old colored woman, lay dead for several days. Sue was buried yesterday at 4 o'clock at the city's expense. More than two hours of delay were passed in waiting for a preacher from Cincinnati, who finally put in an appearance, and thus ended the history of one of our oldest citizens. When the funeral was about to depart a long line of freight

What Might Astonish a Modern Belle.

[From the Sunday Times and Messenger.]
Imagine what a sensation a lady would oreate in these times should she make her appearance dressed in the following costume, a description of which is taken from "Malcom's Anecdotes:" A black silk petticoat, with a red and white calico border; cherry-colored stays, trimmed with bine and silver; a red and dove-colored gown, flowered with large trees; a yellow satin apron, elaborately trimmed; a muslin head dress with lace ruffles; a black silk scarf and a spotted silk hood. "Such was the costume worn by a lady in 1708." Further on, we read of ladies' head dresses costing from one to two hundred dollars. A great deal has been said about the extrawagance of women of the present day; but the modern belle would stand aghast should she be asked to pay two hundred dollars for a bonnet; and it is doubtful whether the expensive head gear referred to was any more becoming to the wearer than the jannty and stylish hats worn by the "girls of the period." [From the Sunday Times and Messenger.]

Hon. Reverdy Johnson, writing from London to the Baltimore Sun, aims the following pointed left-hand compliment at the United States Minister to Spain, following pointed left-hand compliment at the United States Minister to Spain, over the shoulders of Chief Justice Cockburn: "I was present at the trial, recently concluded, of an indictment for a murder of great atrocity, at which Lord Chief Justice Cockburn presided. I heard the opening and concluding appeches of Attorney General Holker. They were plain and business-like efforts, but devoid of strong argument, and equally devoid of surging approaching rhetorical eloquence. But the charge of the Lord Chief Justice was admirable. It was clear, methodical, and evincing an entire mastery of the case, both in its facts and in its law. He exhibited, too, throughout the trial the greatest urbanity, and without exhibiting in the slightest degree that rudeness which one of our countrymen charged him with displaying at the Geneva arbitration, in a publication which (I have reason to know) was disapproved by members of our own Government, and which was received here in contemptuous silence. The writer, too, had the ous silence. The writer, too, had the who were the immediate associates of the Chief Justice."

One service is made of gold, and consists of only two pieces—a cup, with two handles, for the wine, and a small saucer for the bread. It was the gift of some old aristocratic family, and bears their crest of arms. It is supposed to be 115 years old. The other set is of very meany silver, and was given by Georgs IV. It consists of three pieces—a tail tankard for holding the wine; a very handsome goblet of most beautiful proportions, and a large, heavy plate for the bread—all of the pieces bearing the the royal stamp, crown, &c.
